ADVOCACY HIGHLIGHTS FROM 2026

POLICY ~ PLANNING ~ GROWTH

Advocacy remains one of the most important ways the Regina & Region Home Builders' Association delivers value to its members and the broader Residential Construction Industry. In 2026, RRHBA continued to represent the industry on issues affecting housing supply, affordability, land development, regulation and the cost of building.

OCP Growth Plan Review

RRHBA worked closely with the City of Regina throughout its Growth Plan Review to help improve the timing and sequencing of future development, while supporting infrastructure solutions that enable continued infill growth. We continue to advocate for additional servicing capacity, particularly on Regina's east side, where development opportunities remain constrained.

City of Regina Design Standards

RRHBA represented builders and developers as the City reviewed subdivision and neighbourhood design standards, ensuring that proposed changes consider housing affordability, constructability, infrastructure efficiency and the long-term success of new communities.

Deferred Truss Pilot Project

Research and advocacy by RRHBA helped lead to a City pilot project allowing the timing of certain truss-related documentation to be deferred within the permitting process. The objective is to reduce unnecessary delays and help homes move into construction sooner while maintaining regulatory compliance.

Secondary Suite Incentive

RRHBA provided the Saskatchewan Ministry of Finance with industry research demonstrating the importance and effectiveness of the Secondary Suite Incentive. The program was subsequently extended for an additional year. Regina and Saskatoon & Region Home Builders' Associations continue to advocate for the program's continuation.

Saskatchewan Adoption of the 2025 National Model Codes

Working alongside the Saskatoon & Region Home Builders' Association and Saskatchewan's Building and Technical Standards Branch, RRHBA helped achieve a practical approach to Saskatchewan's adoption of the 2025 National Model Codes, effective January 1, 2027.

Saskatchewan is expected to be the first province to adopt the 2025 National Building Code, while taking a measured approach to provisions that would add significant costs without a corresponding benefit. The estimated construction-cost impact of provisions not being adopted or being modified in Saskatchewan exceeds $15,000 per new home.

ADVOCACY HIGHLIGHTS FROM 2026

POLICY ~ PLANNING ~ GROWTH

Rent Control

RRHBA provided both the Provincial Government and Official Opposition with research outlining the risks and unintended consequences of rent control, while recommending alternative approaches that support rental housing supply and affordability.

Building Schools Faster Act

While not an advocacy outcome supported by the industry, RRHBA continues to work with the Ministry of Government Relations to help ensure implementation and regulations are as fair, predictable and workable as possible for land developers and the housing industry.

Cost of Construction Study

RRHBA is the only Home Builders' Association in Canada undertaking a comprehensive, long-term study with developers and builders to map the full cost of delivering a new home.

Our 2026 Cost of Construction Study - the fifth in the series - builds on our research dating back 20 years and identifies how the cost of developing land and constructing new homes has changed, along with the public-policy, infrastructure, regulatory and market factors driving those increases.

The study has become a cornerstone of RRHBA's evidence-based advocacy and will provide important new data for governments, members and the broader community.
